SCALER VITALIZATION NATURAL

It is uncontested that water is one of the most important elements for life.

With the ecological and climatic changes on earth, the scarcity of pure water is strongly noticeable. Not only for people and housing, but also in all economic sectors. For example, in light and heavy industry, or in agriculture, heating installations, food production, etc. This problem has encouraged many scientists around the world to search for technologies for water purification AND vitalization/activation.

Water has the capacity to store information. The most important explanation is the so-called cluster formation: Ions of (harmful) substances dissolved in water are surrounded by water dipole molecules via hydrogen bonds. These are molecules that are positively charged at one end and negatively charged at the other. The resulting grid structures are retained even after the chemical purification of the water. This means that even if the substance dissolved as ions has been removed itself, the information about the presence of this pollutant remains in the form of the grid structures in the water.

This «memory» of the water can be proven, among other things, by the formation of crystallization:

In «positively informed» water, mainly intact hexagonal structures and 60 degree angles are found. Where the water was subject to negative influences, angles of 90 degrees are often visibly formed. Negative influences on the water come from, for example, chemical pollution, high pressure (such as in straight pipes), strong electromagnetic fields or, for example, pumps with a frequency of more than 50 Hz. The Austrian scientist Viktor Schauberger discovered that water can only be optimally purified through turbulence. The vitalization of the water helps the water to return to its original quality and thus has a positive influence on our health.

AquaSwiss System water vitalizer and their effects

The special patented design of the water vitalizer allows the water flow to be swirled twice, according to the «Schauberger» principle. This turbulence is modeled from a natural watercourse and significantly and verifiably improves the water quality. Due to the turbulence and acceleration in the device, water clusters in the water change their structure and composition. The water is enriched with oxygen and its surface tension is reduced.

Revitalized water is not only refreshing when drunk and beneficial for technical use, but also when it's use for bathing, it is perceived as extremely soft and pleasant.

The revitalized water in the swimming pond not only feels good to the bathers, but also contributes considerably to the ecological balance and hygiene of the pond.

For ponds, swimming pools, fountains and biotopes, the solution can be used without any problems with different types of equipment.
